Sunpak Auto 383 Super Flash

The Sunpak 383 is a great budget flash with high output that has been able to fill my needs for the past year. I will be picking up another Sunpak 383 soon to compose more complex lighting setups. It is incredible to be able to do all of this with less money than I would have spent on a single 480ex Speedlite (which has lower light output).

Auto-tryister settings are sufficient for most work. GN of 120 makes it as powerful as many of the more expensive, TTL flashes. Low voltage for this type of flash so can be used on cameras like my EOS ELAN II. Sunpak's 383 flash is superior to the Vivitar 283 and 285 series. Customer Service.

As far as I'm concerned, the Sunpak Auto 383 Super is the best deal out there for a new, powerful, and flexible off camera flash with manual settings. If you want to go used, you might be better off getting a flash with a zoom mode and more settings (like an SB-24 or SB-26) but for a new flash, the Sunpak can't be beat.

The Paramount cords have a Sunpak end that gets stuck in the 383 (some cannot get them out at all). The groove in the plug is the issue. The grooved version work nicely on the Sunpak 544, 522, 511 and likely some other Sunpak flash units, but not well on the 383. A proper plug for the 383 does not have a groove. Enjoy! Lon *

The Sunpak 383 Super has a GN of 120 @ 35mm. This compares to a GN of 98 for the SB-600 and 125 for the SB-800 at the same settings. I used this flash for a few years, until it went "pop" at a wedding. It's good for most people, but wedding work means lots of high-power flashes in a relatively short period of time, which is hard on the circuitry.

The 383 is a classic, no frills autoflash, with no dedication. Generally well regarded for what it is. If you were ever to use this on a non-Nikon camera in the future, the 383 would be the better choice.

I looked up the Sunpak 383 and it has Guide Number 120 for ISO 100. If you use ISO400 film/digicam setting, that is a GN=240. So if your lens is used at f/4, your light can reach 60' and you'll get...
